Chapter 407: The Dawn of the Eternal Concord

The Aftermath of Chaos

The battle against the Primordial Will had shaken the foundations of existence. Realms once fractured by chaos now lay dormant, awaiting restoration. Sung Jin-Woo, Ashborn, and Sung Su-Ho gathered their generals and leaders in the Eternal Concord Chamber, a newly created nexus within the True Absolute One Domain Realm where decisions shaping all existence would be made.

The chamber shimmered with divine energy, its walls depicting the history of the Divine Triad's battles and victories.

Sung Jin-Woo spoke first, his voice resolute. "The Primordial Will is no more, but its remnants will linger. We must fortify the realms to prevent such chaos from ever returning."

Ashborn nodded, his celestial aura glowing faintly. "Balance must be maintained, not through force, but through unity and wisdom."

Su-Ho added, "The time has come to redefine creation itself. The realms must no longer be separate; they must be harmonized under one concord."

The Plan of Unification

The Divine Triad proposed an ambitious plan:

1. The Binding of Realms: Through the combined powers of the Divine Triad, all realms—light, shadow, fire, void, abyss, and nexus—would be interwoven into a single interconnected multiversal structure. This would allow free passage between realms while maintaining balance.

2. The Creation of Guardians: A new order of beings, called the Eternal Wardens, would be forged. These guardians would oversee the flow of energy and ensure no force could disrupt the harmony of existence.

3. The Eternal Concord: A covenant binding all realms, species, and powers to a unified purpose of coexistence. Any who defied the concord would face the combined might of the Divine Triad and their armies.

The Creation of the Eternal Wardens

From the combined essence of the Third World Tree, Sung Jin-Woo drew forth luminous threads of creation. Ashborn infused these threads with celestial light, and Su-Ho added the fiery essence of the dragon's heart.

The result was the birth of the Eternal Wardens:

Towering beings with six wings of pure energy, radiant and shadowed in equal measure.

Eyes imbued with the wisdom of the Divine Triad, capable of seeing all truths.

Armed with Spears of Eternity, weapons that could rewrite the fabric of reality if wielded in unity.

The first Eternal Warden, named Kaelion, bowed before the Divine Triad. "By your will, we shall protect the Eternal Concord."

The Binding of Realms

The Divine Triad ascended to the pinnacle of the True Absolute One Domain Realm, their combined energy radiating across all existence. Sung Jin-Woo activated the power of his Nine Divine Jewels, channeling the energy of creation.

Ashborn unleashed the Light of Eternity, weaving the realms of light and celestial energy.

Su-Ho released the Flames of Concord, binding the fiery realms and the dragon's domain.

As their powers combined, the once-separate realms began to merge seamlessly. Portals formed between worlds, allowing free passage while maintaining the distinct identity of each realm.

A Message to All Creation

As the process completed, Sung Jin-Woo’s voice echoed across all realms, resonating in the hearts of every being.

"To all who live within these realms, hear our decree. No longer shall the boundaries of existence divide us. From this day forth, we are one. The Eternal Concord binds us, a promise of unity, balance, and prosperity."

Cheers erupted across the realms. Angels, dark angels, shadowkins, dragonkins, and countless other beings celebrated this new era of peace and unity.

The Rise of the Saints of Concord

To ensure the Eternal Concord endured, Gabriel descended once more to Earth, selecting a new group of saints—The Saints of Concord. These individuals, chosen for their virtue and wisdom, would act as emissaries of the Divine Triad, spreading their teachings and ensuring the covenant was upheld.

Among the new saints was Elara, a young woman from Earth who had spent her life healing the weak and aiding the oppressed. Gabriel placed a hand on her shoulder. "You shall guide the mortals, reminding them of the light and shadow that dwell within us all."

The Celebration of Unity

A grand celebration was held across all realms, a festival that lasted for seven divine days. The skies were illuminated with celestial and shadowy lights, and the realms resounded with music and joy.

Sung Jin-Woo, standing atop the Eternal Concord Throne, gazed out at the festivities.

"Is this what you envisioned, Father?" he asked, turning to Ashborn.

Ashborn smiled faintly. "This is more than I could have ever dreamed. You have surpassed us all, Jin-Woo."

Su-Ho laughed. "And yet, the work is never done."

The Unseen Threat

As the celebrations continued, a faint ripple passed through the Nexus Realm. Hidden in the farthest reaches of existence, a shadow stirred—a remnant of the Primordial Will.

Watching the festivities from afar, the shadow whispered, "Unity may reign for now, but chaos will always find a way."

The Divine Triad, sensing the disturbance, exchanged knowing glances.

"Our vigilance must never falter," Sung Jin-Woo said, his voice resolute. "Let them come. We will be ready."
